

May is Mental Health Awareness Month

Mental wellbeing across life stages: What makes you resilient?

Mental wellbeing is a lifelong journey that evolves with our needs and experiences. The strategies we use to maintain it are shaped by the challenges we overcome and the strengths we develop. Over time, these strengths build resilience, helping us navigate life’s ups and downs and creating a solid foundation for mental wellbeing.

Reflect on your strengths and how they build resilience

1. Think about past challenges you have faced at different life stages.
2. Identify a strength or skill that helped you overcome each challenge.
3. Write how each strength supports your mental wellbeing today and in the future.

Life stage	Past challenge	Strength used	How this strength supports you now or could in the future
Example	Felt nervous speaking in front of the class	Encouraged by a teacher to practice and take deep breaths	Helps me stay calm and confident in work presentations
Childhood (0–12)
Adolescence and young adulthood (13–25)
Adulthood (26–64)
Older adulthood (65+)

Scan the QR code to visit Member.MagellanHealthcare.com or call your Employee Assistance Program at 1-800-327-4581 (TTY 711) to get more information.